“ It's you Dad.....yes you...whom inspired my appreciation for the outdoors, for nature, and for the value of a college education. During the trips we took to the Ozark Mountains you taught me as a child about respect and a sense of curiosity about the natural world. Your inspiration was the foundation for my life's quest for knowledge about ecology. Through your support and encouragement it was possible for me to attend college and graduate school. I am grateful to have been raised by someone as caring as you were about nature and life. While you may be gone please know that your spirit lives on within me. As I reflect on your life, our life, each and every day that I venture into nature that childhood curiosity you instilled is alive and well within me. Love Steve
