“ My thoughts and prayers are with the family through this time. Eric was a very unique character who brought so much fun and joy to the lives of others. I have very fond memories during my childhood of boating and eating the best omelets and Ry toast after staying the night with Lauren. He was an intelligent man who always made you think of things in a way you possibly couldn't have.

“ My most heartfelt condolences to Eric's family and friends on his unexpected passing. Eric was always a nice, likeable and generous person, and a fair boss. This made my job at QTS the best job I've ever had. He went out of his way to solve problems and was very knowledgeable about a variety of subjects. I also consider Eric a friend and will miss him very much.

“ I just saw the notice of Eric's passing in the SMU Spring Magazine, and I wish to offer my sympathy at this difficult time for the Paul family.

I primarily knew Eric as a Freshman at SMU, when he and I lived on the same floor in Morrison Hall. He was one of a group of four of us that would sometimes get into mischief after finishing our homework late at night. I'm not sure who was the worst influence on whom, but it doesn't matter. I remember Eric's fascination with engineering and his interest in ham radio. Electronics was a hobby of mine, and I enjoyed talking tech with Eric. Ironically, though I did not get a degree in engineering, I would become a ham radio operator myself years later.

Eric and I stayed in touch while we were still students, but after graduation we all went our ways, and it has been decades since I last saw him. I was just thinking of Eric the other day for no known reason, and I am sorry we didn't connect again to talk about radios.

“ He always had something interesting to relate that probably had little to do with the topic at hand, and I liked that as my brain works the same way. Was always a pleasure to deal with and will be missed.
