“ Dear Friends and Family of Iona,

I remember my Aunt Iona as always being happy. Even in the later years when she really wasn't, she was always cheerful on the inside. As a young boy, some of my happiest memories were going to visit my Aunt Iona and Uncle Howard -- she was always "the fun one" -- and she always made a way-too-precocious kid feel like an adult around her, which was of course exactly what I expected. As my parents' health started to fail, she was always there for them. She was always a realist, too. She didn't sugar-coat anything. It's probably the thing I'll miss the most about her -- she told it like it was. I already miss her, and I know you all do too.
