February 18, 1947 - December 12, 2013

Poem for Sallie Batton who died with No Family! Please Pray for those who are Alone...

" IF God compel thee to this destiny,
To die alone, with none beside thy bed
To ruffle round with sobs thy last word said
And mark with tears the pulses ebb from thee,--
Pray then alone, ' O Christ, come tenderly !
By thy forsaken Sonship in the red
Drear wine-press,--by the wilderness out-spread,--
And the lone garden where thine agony
Fell bloody from thy brow,--by all of those Permitted desolation s, comfort mine !
No earthly friend being near me, interpose
No deathly angel 'twixt my face and thine,
But stoop Thyself to gather my life's rose,
And smile away my mortal to Divine ! '

Elizabeth Barrett Browning

“ I just learned of the death of this dear old friend, with whom I had lost touch after high school. I knew her as Sallie Huston, who--to describe her in a few words--was extremely bright and creative, funny, independent, and delightfully eccentric. I had tried several times to find her but, sadly, was too late in accomplishing this. I would have loved to reconnect with her as an adult. It seems to be true that she had no close family at the time of her passing; her parents were gone, and she had no siblings. But it seems evident that she was truly cared for at the end, and that is what counts. I feel sure that all who knew Sallie were uplifted by her charming personality.
